

My topic is on sustainability and my target audience is the general public. My topic will rely on the lens of data visualization and narrative. Some of the features that my project will include is the lifetime of several commonly thrown trash which one of them is a plastic bag. It might also include a box of items that the user can swap to understand the recycling time of the object. Some challenges that I might face includes the graphics and the users' attention span, but I also want to mimic the tedious numbers of years that it takes for plastic bags to decompose.